Dropped Dead At Newport

John Foshay, one of the best known pioneer residents of Albany, died suddenly at Newport Thursday evening as the result of heart failure. He had been talking with an old friend a short time before, when he started for a walk with his daughter. Complaining of being tired the old man sat down for a rest, and expired suddenly and apparently painless.

Mr. Foshay was for many years a school teacher and after retiring served the Albany city schools as director until a short time ago, when he refused reelection. He was at one time a member of the wholesale drug firm of Foshay and Mason of Albany, but had retired from this concern.

For the past several years he had lived in retirement with his daughter. Physically extremely weak, his was one of the brightest minds in the city, especially in matters affecting school and the interests of children was his advice eagerly sought. Mrs. Foshay died several years ago.

Missionary Work For Panama Canal

Some otherwise well informed people still entertain the notion that the Panama republic is somewhere to the southwest and that the canal zone is a public work that will perforate the isthmus for the greater benefit of nations other than our own. They do not realize that the Panama canal is on a line with Buffalo, N. Y., and that ships carrying Trans-Mississippi products, if they sail from Galveston, travel directly east, and if from New Orleans the line of travel is southeast. The Panama canal is a highway in which the Trans-Mississippi states are more directly interested than almost any other section of country, for it is here and also in the Latin-American states that the greatest benefit will be bestowed. All this and other interesting matter connected with the zone will be displayed in illustrated lectures by government experts at the August session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, to be held in Denver. This city is the geographical center of the Trans-Mississippi states, and it is here that the government proposes to do some missionary work, and if possible awaken the commercial mind of the western states to the tremendous possibilities that are shortly to be opened.

This front, which is a splendid piece of architecture, will be moved to Albany this week. It is thought the rooms will be completed and the Club established in its new quarters early next week.

THE DALLES TO DO SOME PAVING

The city council at The Dalles has passed the paving ordinance which has been postponed from time to time. The ordinance provides for the paving of Second street with bitulithic pavement from the east side of Taylor to the west side of Liberty street. The estimated cost to abutting property owners will be $41,393.55, or not more than $2.03 per square yard. The ordinance provides for grading and specifies the character of the work. The City Recorder is authorized to advertise immediately for bids in order that the work may be completed this Fall.
